Dental Consent Form

Please Read

During the physical examination, it is often not possible to completely evaluate the degree of dental disease. Only when your pet is under anesthesia can a thorough dental exam be done. Because of this, dental problems such as loose, diseased or fractured teeth may be later discovered while under anesthesia. We try to make the preliminary estimate accurate, but this is not always possible in the examination room. In order to accurately assess your pet's dental needs, some additional procedures may be necessary.

1. Dental extractions (ex: hopeless, painful or fractured teeth)

*A dental technician or doctor can call you during the dental procedure to discuss extractions. Requesting a phone call will prolong your pet's time under anesthesia, potentially increasing anesthetic complications and will require an additional consent form.

Call for extractions? ___ Yes ___ No

2. (OPTIONAL) Oravet Gel is a sealant that creates an invisible barrier which prevents plaque and tartar from attaching to the teeth.

The first application will be applied today. Oravet requires weekly at home applications starting two weeks after the dental procedure.
